11:08:20 From Debra Rader : Hello everyone! Debra from Lucca, Italy.
11:10:37 From Debra Rader : Love the term 'heart books' as heart is central to DEIJ work.
11:17:13 From Kimbra : Mum of daughter we adopted in 2008...

listening...tearing up!

11:18:04 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : Mom to two amazing Ethiopian-American children, feeling so connected and missing Christina!

11:19:45 From Debra Rader : Yes, so many treasured children's books also provide opportunities for critical thinking for adults and children alike.

11:20:03 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : Such a necessary conversation right. here.

11:21:10 From Debra Rader : Yes, Kimberly. I agree.

11:21:44 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : Please check out Christina's booklist in our ECIS Libraries Week Goodreads Group later today: <https://www.goodreads.com/group/show/1163951-ecis-libraries-week-2021>

11:23:29 From Cathy : thank you

11:41:44 From Kimbra : I'm not quite sure I understand why Christina is referring to the wordless picture books as Worldless, I missed her reasoning. Anyone who can shed light? lmk. cheers. I LOVE wordless picture books.

11:41:46 From Helle Kirstein : Hike is shortlisted for the Kate Greenaway medal - there are fabulous teaching resources for this book (and the other shortlisted titles) on the Carnegie/Greenaway website: <https://carnegiegreenaway.org.uk/cilip-greenaway-medal-shortlist-2021/>

11:42:39 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : Thanks @Helle! Perfect SDG text for all ages.

11:43:09 From Cathy : thank you

11:43:34 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : @Kimbra, I was thinking hard about this...perhaps that the Worldless evokes any world based on the reader?

11:43:55 From Kimberly Tyo-Dickerson : Let's ask her to share with us more about this!

11:44:00 From Debra Rader : Christina, thank you for sharing such rich children's books that not only promote DEI and ABAR education, they also beautifully develop intercultural understanding. Thank you for your wonderfully heartfelt presentation. It was an inspiring journey!

11:44:02 From Kimbra : Yes please Kim

11:44:57 From Karen Van Drie To All Panelists : no sound

11:45:05 From Clara Konkwo : Thank you!

11:45:18 From Ruchika Singh To All Panelists : Can you please share her email ID

11:45:54 From Sarah D : Really enjoyed this! Makes me miss reading with little ones.

11:46:39 From Carolyn Jeziorski : For me, worldless means that the book transcends a place-there isn't a set place, many could relate to it, etc.

11:46:44 From Sarah D : I took it to mean transcending a particular world - like beyond any one culture

11:46:46 From Carolyn Jeziorski : Since there isn't text to put it in context.

11:47:04 From Claire Luo To All Panelists : Really love picture books which takes me to the library. Thanks v much for sharing.

11:47:35 From Kimbra : thank you for those responses

11:48:13 From Nathalie : Thanks Christina, so many wonderful titles!
